Okay, I am 32 years old. But, I always felt cheated out of learning Latin in school, and I want to expose my daughter to the structure and sounds of Latin early, so I bought this delightful beginner's course. The textbook shows examples of conversation in Latin through cartoon drawings of Roman citizens living in Great Britain almost 2000 years ago. Minimus, a little brown mouse, is our tour guide through lessons in Roman culture and history, as well as our instructor in the finer points of Latin. There is a light touch throughout the course, befitting one designed for 7-10 year olds, but much appreciated by this older learner, too. The accompanying CD is a must, though, as there is no handy pronunciation guide with the book. Listening to the CD is great, and I have played it while driving around town on errands. If you've read through the text, you can follow the CD even without following the text at the same time -- and how fun to hear a "dead" language come alive!

This is a great addition to the text book. The animal voices are about the most adorable thing I've ever heard. The voice actors also have British accents and I am one of those Americans who find that charming. I would not recommend the series without purchasing the cd because it really helps one with the pronunciation.

My 5 children and I are thoroughly enjoying this CD along with the pupil books and teachers manual. It works well even for junior high and high school homeschoolers.

Follows the text exactly, so there is not a lot on the CD. However, good for reviewing pronunciation, which we like to do in the car. I recommend as a companion to the text, but not otherwise.

This is a great little CD, it really helped my eight year old daughter learn how to speak faster and apply what she is learning in lessons to actual conversations. I highly recommend this CD as a companion to the book, which is also wonderful.

An entertaining story with good illustrations for learning Latin.

Arrived on time and as described.

So great, I'm always parroting little phrases to the kids.
