Madison Schacht: After two years as a social media assistant, Madison Schacht makes her debut in the book industry. Her creativity, and outstanding eye for design is what separates her from the crowd. With a love for Jesus and passion for music, she ministers on the worship team at her church. Darlene Schacht: Darlene Schacht is known by her readers as The Time-Warp Wife. She is an Evangelical Christian whose number one priority is to serve Jesus Christ in every area of her life. She and her husband Michael live in Manitoba Canada. Married 26 years, they have four children (three still at home) and a pug. She's an award winning and New York Times best-selling author.

This book is fabulous! I didn't pay attention to the size of the book and it's quite large. About the size of a spiral notebook but thicker and sturdier. That's perfectly fine with me but just keep that in mind. These activities are great. The graphics are fun and are great for boy or girl. I can't wait for my daughter to use this book.

I purchased this to help my 9 year old transition from Children's Church into "adult" church. For the most part, I'm very pleased with the book. There are three pages per week, with several different activities that help kids engage in the church service. My daughter has been using the book for a month now and she is still excited about using it. The activities are the same from one week to the next, so I'm curious whether her enthusiasm will dwindle later on. Activities include a checklist for such things as "I said a prayer when I got up this morning, I brought my Bible to church, etc.

My grandchildren used these books yesterday for the first time and LOVE THEM!! Their mom was happy they were more quiet and less wiggly. Their father, the Pastor, was super impressed with this book!! Love the content. The kids are excited to earn points and really connected with the prayer list section! Thank you for this book!!

I bought four of these for children in my Sunday school class and they LOVE them! I looked over the notes of one of the children on Sunday and they really did have a good grasp of the sermon and I give credit to this book for that. I only hope they keep it up. And by the way, all of the parents were positive about the book as well. Good job by the writers. Also, the illustrations are very cute.

What a fabulous idea. We really enjoy our books and we have received so many compliments from others at church. I would say this is good up to age 10/11, depending on how strong of writer or reader you have. There is small space for notes, so if you want to encourage more note taking then I would say go for the book for young ladies. This book also has space for drawing, a word list to keep the children focused during the sermon as they try and listen for certain words. A list that reminds you to read your bible during the week, pray, come to church with the right attitude. A space to write the scripture for that day's sermon. As well as your favorite worship song that was sung during church. There is also a section to write prayers. If your children sit in adult service, this is a great tool to have with you. It keeps them engaged, keeps them busy, and teaches them to start taking notes, as well as providing something to take home and study during the week.

This is a great book for kids that are old enough to be listening to the sermon but not old enough maybe to be interested the entire time. I purchased for my 9 year old daughter. She likes it & it has helped her (most Sundays) with focusing more on the sermon and not getting fidgety until closer to the end of service. It has plenty of spaces to write & extra space around the designated spaces, so they can doodle more if they like. It has suggestions for what to write, but of course, they can write whatever or add to that. I gave her some colored pencils & markers to use with it. I think this is a genius idea & wonder why no one else has thought of it before!

I appreciate the effort to make a great books to engaged children in the preaching of God'd word. However I found that words like sin and salvation weren't included in the list of words to hunt for. I have my children add those in. Points are a great incentive for children.

My 10 year old son has thoroughly enjoyed this book. Sermons can be hard and long for a child to sit through. This book has helped him maintain his focus and be able to understand more of what is being said. I only wish I had known about this book sooner!
