Who Was Neil Armstrong?

Synopsis

On July 20, 1969, Neil Armstrong stepped on the moon and, to an audience of over 450 million people, proclaimed his step a "giant leap for mankind." This Eagle Scout built his own model planes as a little boy and then grew up to be a test pilot for experimental aircraft before becoming an astronaut. Over 80 black-and-white illustrations bring Armstrong's story to life.

Roberta Edwards lives in New York, New York. Ken Call lives in Northbrook, Illinois.

My nephew loves these. They're easy to read and super informative. I love that he gets to learn about history in a quick and child-friendly way

One of two books on Neil Armstrong which I ordered for my grandson for a school project on astronauts. He found it very helpful in providing background information on Armstrong, and found the book clear enough for his elementary grade level to extract information to include in the project.

I purchased this book for my 3rd grade son, who needed a 100 page biography book to do his school book report on. Overall, I am pleased with the purchase as the book had good info, was reading level appropriate for my child, and he found it fun and interesting to read. We have already been shopping other titles in the "Who Was" series, as he will need another book report book of the same style for later in the year.

My son really enjoyed this book. The whole series is wonderful as he has read several of them, but who doesn't like learning more about Neil Armstrong. It has really made him understand more about the man and the moon mission. This one in particular was fun for him because he is fascinated by outer space. It helped him want to learn more about the moon and solar system.

He went to the moon. How could I diss this book?

My eleven year son loves this series of books. This book was perfect for his research for his wax museum project at school.

Daughter loves the book, nice addition to the "Who Was" series great books for my kids to read on their own!
