Classicist No. 13: The American South

Synopsis

The Classicist is an annually published scholarly journal offering extensive insight into the classical tradition that continues to inform architecture and art. With an appeal to architects, artists, historians, patrons, and the everyday art lover, the Classicist provides content spanning modern topics in architecture, illustrated images of the work of contemporary practitioners, professional portfolios, and scholarly articles addressing the theme of the issue. The Classicist No. 13: The American South, is the first issue to be organized by regional theme. A geographical location markedly inspired by the classical tradition from the colonial era to modern times, the southern American states offer voluminous architectural material to be explored. This issue is guest edited by David Gobel and features articles by Emilie Johnson, Michael Fazio, Margize Howell, Peter M. Kenney, Nathaniel Robert Walker, and Marie Frank.
